These are real exotic woods that are laminated onto the bobbins with slow curing epoxy, then hand trimmed, sanded, and finished with multiple coats of nitrocellulose guitar lacquer and buffed to a high polish. The natural shell and artificial laminates are done by the same process. These materials are very thin and fragile during processing. It is delicate and tedious hand work, but the end result is quite spectacular. Since these are natural materials no two are exactly alike, and supplies will vary over time.

Angel Wing

Abalone (Paua)

(photos don't really do this justice, the pearlescence is hard to photograph)

Currently Available Bobbin Overlays of Artificial Laminates

Tortoiseshell

Any overlay bobbins that are not already in stock will take an extra week or so to make. There are several steps that require 1-2 days curing time between steps.
